Samuel J. Tilden has been elected a director of the Cleveland and Pittsburg railway. It won't be long before that road is a financial corpse.

The people mustn't think Mrs. Langtry is borrowing trouble over the newspaper attacks. She likes them. She has made $80,000 since she came here, has had lots of fun with Freddie, and still draws large houses.

The Evening Wisconsin is authority for the statement that General Harrison C. Hobart, Alexander Mitchell's private secretary, who is in a position to speak by the card; says there will be "a sharp run" between the C., M. and St. P. and Northwestern railroads in this state for the Northern Pacific business. Vanderbilt has come into control of the Northwestern and is now, as General Hobart says, "face to face with Alexander Mitchell."

A digest of the Wisconsin reports from 1 Pinney to 55 Wisconsin, is in preparation by Messrs. Charles E. Shepard, of Fond du Lac, and Thomas R. Shepard, of Milwaukee and will be published in the course of the spring, by Messrs Banks & Brothers, of New York. The work will make two volumes. The judges of the supreme court have examined the proof sheets and declare themselves well satisfied with the work. A number of the circuit judges and leading lawyers of the state also give it their warm approval. It will be completed in two volumes.

It is claimed that there are sixteen Americans who in the aggregate are worth nearly one billion dollars. Their names and the millions they are supposed to be worth, are as follows: W. H. Vanderbilt, $260,000,000; Jay Gould, $100,000,000; Leland Stanford, $100,000,000; C. P. Huntington, $100,000,000; Charles Crocker, $60,000,000; Mrs. Hopkins, $50,000,000; Russell Sage, $40,000,000; James Flood, $40,000,000; J. G. Fair, $40,000,000; J. G. Mackay, $30,000,000; Cyrus W. Field, $25,000,000; James Keene, $20,000,000; estate of Thomas Scott, $20,000,000; John W. Garrett, $20,000,000; Samuel J. Tilden, $15,000,000; Alexander Mitchell, $20,000,000. In each case it will be very safe to divide these figures by 2, and yet give each one credit for all he is worth.

It has always been believed that Thomas Jefferson rode into Washington on horse-back unattended when he was first inaugurated president, and that he tied his horse to the park fence, walked alone to the capitol, and was sworn in. People have enjoyed reading this instance of democratic symplicity, but now comes Ben Perley Poore, of the Boston Journal, one of the oldest newspaper correspondents in Washington, who says that he has found proof in the congressional library that Jefferson was not inaugurated with the democratic simplicity that has been supposed, but with cannons firing and whatever display was possible. Can it be possible that this pleasant little story, like that of Washington and the hatchet, will prove a fabrication?

Those who claim that the tariff should be reformed to the extent of virtually bringing about free trade, or what they prefer to call it, a tariff for revenue, which is one and the same thing, should read the facts the tariff commission have presented to the public, showing the difference between the price of labor in England and the United States. Take, for instance, the manufactory of pottery. In England, the weekly wages of men engaged in the potteries in February 1882, averaged about $8 while at this period the average weekly wages paid to American workmen was $19. A readjustment of the tariff on the basis of a tariff for revenue only, would greatly reduce the wages of American pottery makers without any corresponding benefits. Such a readjustment would effect other branches of American industry, and reduce the wages nearly on a level with the laborers of Europe.

A great deal of fun has been poked at Mr. Thomas M. Nichol for reasons which our readers can understand much easier than we can explain. Since he purchased the Denver circle railway for a syndidate, fresh stories have been started about him, and these have called out a card from the great apostle of hard money, which is published in the Milwaukee Sentinel. In answer to this card, which is largely biographical, the editor of the Sentinel says: "We publish a letter from Mr. Thomas M. Nichol in another column, in regard to some personal remarks made respecting him in the Evening Wisconsin. We can say from personal knowledge that when Mr. Nichol first entered the field as a speaker in the canvass for state officers, five years ago, he was invited to do so by the then chairman of the republican state committee, without any suggestions directly or indirectly from Mr. Nichol that he wished to be so employed. He rendered very valuable services in that canvass, and we have every reason to believe that he acted regardless of any pecuniary motive, with a personal disinterestedness as rare as it was praiseworthy. He was neither seeking money nor office, and it is our experience that persons of that kind are seldom met with among campaign speakers."

THE COLLISION.

Further Details of the Disaster---The Statements of the Two Captains.

The Doomed Steamer Managed With Great Coolness by Officers and Crew.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The captain of the steamer Kirby Hall states that the city of Brussels, although the engines were stationary, was coming on with the tide with such an impetus that a collision was inevitable. The purser of the City of Brussels states that at the last moment they put on steam with the view of moving to avoid the collision, but useless.

As showing the terrible nature of the collision, the purser says the main compartment of the City of Brussels was cut right in two. After the collision the fog thickened, and it was dangerous even for boats to move about. They, however, approached the sinking vessel and found a boy named Hamilton, half drowned, clinging to the mizzen cross trees. The two Italians drowned seemed to have lost their wits from terror, and jumped overboard without waiting to see what could be done for their safety. The persons lost include Connor, the quartermaster, and Cochrane, the steward.

Mr. Skinner, a passenger on the City of Brussels, states that the pilot jumped into the first boat launched. This so enraged the captain that he called upon the crew to pull him out. This caused the only incident of confusion. Matters were conducted so smoothly that until the five boats were lowered the passengers did not believe the disaster was really serious.

Later details of the disaster say Capt. Land was one of the first picked up by the boats, although he, with the chief engineer, had been the last to leave the rigging. When rescued he was in the act of passing a life buoy to a drowning comrade.

The passengers of the City of Brussels have drawn up the following memorial: "We, who have just been rescued from a watery grave, wish to express our sincere gratitude and admiration of the courage, promptitude and coolness in danger exemplified by the captain, purser and other officers of the ill-fated vessel, which has just gone down so near the termination of her voyage."

Neither the passengers nor crew were able to save anything, and many persons were obliged to leave the ship with but little clothing. There is no doubt if the fog had cleared a little sooner all would have been saved.

The theory concerning the drowning of the seamen is that when the vessel lurched they were struck by the rigging and rendered insensible. One man was found dead in the rigging.

Many of the Brussels passengers are suffering greatly from the shock. Besides the breach in the hull, the bulkhead of the City of Brussels was shifted by the violence of the collision, thus accounting for her speedy sinking.

Capt. Land states that after the City of Brussels had been stopped for four minutes, steamers' whistles were heard on the starboard and port sides. He concluded the steamers would pass in parallel lines. Suddenly a white light appeared on the starboard bow, and a minute and a half afterward a vessel ran into the City of Brussels. He immediately ordered the boats to be lowered and a spare sail placed over the hole, but before the latter order could be carried out the carpenter reported there was fourteen feet of water in the forehold, and the engineers stated that the fires would be out in about a minute. The passengers then took to the boats, and the crew without orders filled the other boat. When the ship sank as far as the bridge, Capt. Land called out for every one to save himself, and jumped into the water. He and the others floated upon a spar until rescued.

Capt. Land highly praises the way the officers and crew worked under the circumstances. Capt. Land himself was twenty minutes in the water, and all the papers of the City of Brussels were lost.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The cargo of the City of Brussels consisted of 783 bales of cotton, 146 bales of hops, 4,027 boxes of bacon, 2,448 boxes of cheese, 51 tierces of salt beef, 26 tierces of pork, 70 barrels of pork, 250 barrels of apples, 22 barrels of oysters, 144 half barrels of tongues, 150 packages of butter, 173 bags of flour, 25 bags of cocoa and coffee, 254 bags of clover-seed, 83 cases of sealskins, 122 cases of tobacco, 119 packages of sundries, and 100 tones of fresh beef and mutton. There was no specie on board the vessel. The steamship carried out 41 bags of letters and 86 bags of newspapers. For delivery at Queenstown there were 30,604 letters, 2,419 of which were registered, and 66 bags of newspapers. For Liverpool there were 1,719 letters, 60 of them being registered, and 20 bags of newspapers. One bag of letters and two of newspapers were from Boston and the same quantity from Philadelphia.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—The insurance on the cargo of the City of Brussels is reported from $75,000 to $100,000 in Boston marine companies, and distributed among the China, Boston, Boylston, India, and Manufacturers' offices.

TENNESSEE'S TREASURER.

A Requisition Forwarded and a Reward Offered.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 9.—Yesterday morning Gov. Hawkins received the following:

"NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 8, 1:55 a. m.—TO THE GOVERNOR OF TENNESSEE: Marsh T. Polk is arrested in San Antonio, Tex. What action shall I take in the matter?

"W. J. FATRELL,
"Principal Commercial Detective Agency, New Orleans."

The following dispatch was sent in reply:

"Bring or send M. T. Polk here immediately.
"ALVIN HAWKINS, Governor."

Gov. Hawkins, at 10 o'clock, telegraphed the governor of Texas to hold Polk until a requisition in form could be forwarded. It appears, however, that the detectives fear they cannot hold the prisoner on the governor's dispatch until the Tennessee authorities reach San Antonio.

Yesterday a resolution was adopted in both houses of the legislature, authorizing the governor to offer a reward of $5,000 for the delivery of Polk to the Tennessee authorities, and directing him to immediately make a requisition on the governor of Texas for the return of Polk to Tennessee.

Small-Pox in Virginia.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Jan. 9.—Small-pox is raging in Roanoke county. Thirty cases are already reported. The towns of Roanoke and Nytheville have quarantined against Salem, and other southwestern towns will do likewise. Roanoke college is suspended, and the students have gone home. The public schools are also closed and business is at a standstill.

Dickson Held to Bail.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Judge Snell has rendered his decision in the Dickson case, holding Dickson in $2,500 bail to appear before the grand jury to answer for embracery, in violation of Sec. 5,404 of the revised statutes, in regard to juries.

Arkansas' One-Legged Governor.

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 9.—James H. Berry, a one-legged ex-Confederate soldier, was inaugurated governor with imposing ceremonies, in the presence of a large number of spectators.

The Dead Lion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—It seems that The New York Times was premature in announcing that Gambetta died in the arms of his mistress, and was carried home and dropped in the vestibule of his house, or words to that effect. He only hit himself, like Vallandingham, with one stray ball. Specials received here, probably padded, say that ultra Catholics and royalists recited the scenes at the death-bed and said that hell could not wait for him, but had anticipated death with its tortures. The sickening details of the autopsy, published with horrible minuteness, were gloated upon by the fanatics. "He will rot away before he reaches the Palais Bourbon," they cried. "The enemy of God and the enemy of France, he cannot enter the Madeleine." On every side one heard the wild utterances of a popular frenzy expending itself in a thousand different directions. There was no sobriety in the grief of his friends, nor moderation in the senseless outbursts of his enemies. De Rouledo, the poet, made a shameful scene over the coffin, assaulting Mayer, editor of The Lanterne, and both being dragged, fighting, from the presence of the dead by the public. Over one hundred thousand people went through, and the atmosphere from the immense heaps of flowers was suffocating.

KEENE.

He Talks to "Gath" of a Day of Reckoning.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—"Gath" says: Mr. James Keene, the world-renowned operator in stocks, at the request of one of his friends agreed to talk with me last night at 9 o'clock, and took me aside at Delmonico's at the hour named, when I put the question to him:

"I would like to have your judgment about the near financial future."

"This country is very large," said Mr. Keene, "and I feel some diffidence about expressing with great positiveness any prophecy of general application. It has a very energetic people, and a remarkable soil and climate, and a very large established population. What I say to you frankly need not affect your own judgment, unless you see reason for my conclusions. I take the view, from all I can see and gather, that a relapse, if not a collapse, must be close before us. I think the business situation is extremely bad, and I attribute it to extraordinary inducements to rush forward with constructions in this country, under the stimulation of all kinds which we have realized for a few years past. We have everything marked up too high; the capacity of the country to produce and manufacture is altogether beyond the capacity to sell. Unless I am greatly mistaken, the hard hand of necessity will shake the water out of some of those bubbles, and when they begin to shrink some of them will burst.

"You look over this city, and you will find hardly any of the merchants or manufacturers or commission men making anything. Go around those New York hotels, and inquire as to their percentages compared to two years ago. They will all tell you that they are not making money as they were, and the consumer and visitor is retrenching. Go into the stores just now, after the holidays, and see how many merchants tell you they have had a prosperous Christmas. The mercantile establishments in this city and throughout the country are crammed with goods. The factories cannot dispose of what they make, nor the merchants of what they hold. Go into Wall street among the eleven hundred brokers there, and ask how many of them are making any money. There is no public in the street. The stocks are kept up to their visionary values by manipulation. The iron mills are shutting down. All scheming is without its reward. No more money can be borrowed in this market for new enterprises, and with difficulty can money be obtained for the most rational of those long under way and not yet completed. The supply of money has practically ceased from Europe. The indications are too plain not to be interpreted that we are standing on insecure foundations. I believe we are standing on a hollow abyss."

"Upon what do you base this discouraging view, Mr. Keene?"

"Upon the expansion of every enterprise, with few exceptions, that I can put my hands on. There are about $8,000,000,000 worth of securities listed on this stock exchange. Of these only about $700,000,000 worth pay dividends, high or low; the rest pay nothing at all. When you come to select individual corporations you can see where that $8,000,000,000 has come from. Take the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, for example. Between two and three years ago it had about 1,700 miles of road, $40,000,000 of bonds, $12,000,000 of preferred stock and $50,000,000 of common stock. Now, the increase in all these elements is appalling."

Mr. Keene named the figures to me of the present debt in its various forms, but I took no notes and do not possess his data. I think he said that the St. Paul system has now 4,500 miles of road. The stock was selling under 90 at the time he first referred to. It was now far above par, and yet it was staggering under one of the most enormous debts and burdens of water put upon any property of which we are aware. Mr. Keene gave the same figures in general, and predictions about the Northwestern railroad and about the Omaha railroad.

"These three systems," he said, "have completely gridironed all the country through which they run. They have invaded each other's territories in the mad pursuit of freights, and in the passion to issue more bonds, to be allowed to lay more road and derive the profits from such reckless building, bonding and stocking. Do you suppose that there will be no day of reckoning for operations of that kind? The day is already overdue. The people will wake up at last, and apply their reason to this condition of things, where a mad going into debt is taking place under their eyes, and sustained by the daily manipulation of these stocks on the street.

POSTAL TELEGRAPHY.

The First Move in Congress Against the Telegraph Companies.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Congressman Anderson, of Kansas, who has resolved upon an effort to break up the telegraph monopoly, has made the first move in that direction by introducing a bill to establish a system of postal telegraphy as an adjunct to the postoffice department. In order to avoid the difficulties that would be encountered in getting a special appropriation for the telegraph system, Mr. Anderson has drawn his bill so as to provide for the issue by the government of $2,000,000 of bonds, drawing 3 per cent interest. The bonds are not to mature before twenty years after the passage of the act, and are to be subject to call and payment within ten years following maturity. According to Mr. Anderson's plan a portion of the profits of the system to the amount of $3,000,000 yearly, shall, after the twentieth year, be applied to the payment of the bonds, so that at the end of the thirtieth year the entire bonded debt will be extinguished.

Mr. Anderson's bill provides that there shall be uniform rates of 25 cents per message of ten words or less, and 25 cents for every additional ten words. It contemplates a telegraph postal office at every postoffice where there is the carrier system.

Chicago Board of Trade Election.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.

The Chicago board of trade held its annual election for officers yesterday. The contest was between two tickets, headed by H. W. Rogers and J. B. Hobbs, respectively, for president. The polls closed at 2 o'clock, 1,170 votes were polled, Mr. Hobbs receiving 613, electing him by a majority of 54.

Failure in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 9.—Great excitement was caused yesterday by the failure of F. J. Dixon, grocer. He made an assignment to Peter Van Vechton. Liabilities, $60,000; assets, $40,000. The most of the heavier creditors are eastern parties. The cause of the failure is bad debts.

M'DONALD'S BOOM.

If the South Wants Him it Will Have to Take Him Bald-Headed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A writer in The Tribune says: "Gov. Cleveland's message has been eagerly pounced upon by the partisans of Randall, who are equally industrious in Pennsylvania to hamstring Gov. Pattison at the outset, so as to let into the presidential arena nothing but the old, coagulated, dry personal refuse, which brought defeat on a confiding minority for twenty years past. The scheme of having a governor-elect promulgate the condition of the state before he has even ruled it a single day is a relic of the old rhetorical period, and puts a high premium upon wily and morbid old age; over fresh and untraveled, however warm and upright youth. There are jealous influences in the Democratic party which will never let it succeed—old desocialized reprobates, who resent the appearance of any virgin competitors, as the leading influence in Sodom scowled upon the angel who happened to drop in.

"The McDonald boom is no doubt the main counter-current Cleveland has to overcome or coalesce with. I found it in Indiana a full tide already, having engulfed Hendricks, and even diminished Ben Harrison's chances to the point that the Republicans say Harrison could not beat McDonald the presidential year in the Hoosier state. The south will therefore have to determine between the west and east, and will again become the Burgundian power in this empire. All Democratic Indiana has declared war against any Ohio man for presidential candidate, and there is no other doubtful Republican state in the west. So it is New York against Indiana; and, as long as New York is moderately sure for the Democracy, the tendency will be to go west. McDonald, too, is not in public office so as to make any mistakes. The chances now are as 100 to 90 between Cleveland and McDonald, with old Mac creeping up. McDonald has an unquestionably strong record as a man too good for the Democratic party. He has never been anything his party was on a critical issue. He showed up the Knights of the Golden Circle, and told Gov. Morton that they were a nest of traitors. He was in favor of killing rebels in arms against the government wherever found. He never quarreled with Gov. Morton, but secretly admired that positive northern quantity. He was never weak-kneed on the currency or bond questions, but considered Andrew Jackson a better Democrat than Thomas Jefferson on these and other things. If the south wants him it will have to take him bald-headed; but that head has the prettiest pillow that was ever brought to a widower's couch by an old presidential aspirant, a face of the Marie Antoinette style, with brilliant, dark eyes, Austrian chin, and gray hair turned in youth from not having had a good man like this one the first time."

"BY THE ETERNAL!"

Celebration of the Anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans.

The Gathering of the Ohio Democracy at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 9.—The Fifth ward is the center of Cleveland's Democracy, and it was in the Fifth's newly-organized Jackson club that yesterday's celebration had its inception. It was at first intended to make it a national affair, but, as all the distinguished men from abroad sent letters of regret instead of coming in person, the occasion took on the form of a gathering of the Ohio Democrats. The afternoon and evening trains brought in a number of visitors, but the attendance was not nearly what was expected. The city armory was elaborately decorated and trimmed in preparation for the speaking and ball, and all arrangements possible made for the reception and entertainment of those who did come. The attendance at the armory in the evening was fairly large, and at 9 o'clock a series of speeches in the line of the occasion were made by a number of Ohio Democrats, congressman-elect Foran of Cleveland, presiding. After this feature the armory was given up to dancing for the rest of the evening, while such Cleveland people as had subscribed for banquet tickets, with some hundred of the guests, repaired to the Weddell house, where a banquet had been spread. Hon. Henry B. Payne, on behalf of the Cleveland Democrats and as president of the evening, welcomed the guests by a short speech. After defining his position on local and state issues, he paid his respects to the tariff.

Letters of regret were received from S. J. Tilden, Allen G. Thurman, Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania, ex-Governor Bishop, Abram S. Hewett, Governor Ludlow of New Jersey, Gen. Hancock, and a great many others.

The main event of the celebration, so far as visitors were concerned, was the banquet, for which the orators had prepared themselves, several speeches being especially felicitous and to the point. A great interest clustered around the venerable Judge Patton, of Defiance, who was present at the first inauguration of Jackson, and who served as one of his district attorneys for western Pennsylvania. His relation of a breakfast scene, at which he was the president's guest, seemed to link the far past with the present in a wonderful manner. Judge Hoadley was particularly applauded, as he had chosen to make his speech not only in reference to the victory of last fall and the hopes of next year, but with some reference to his own standing as a possible candidate for governor on the state ticket. The absence of Col. Fellows, of New York, who had been detained, was regretted. The congressman-elect of Cincinnati was also absent, but his place was filled by Congressman-elect Mayberry, of Detroit. It was early morning before either the banquet at the Weddell or the ball at the armory was concluded.

BOSTON.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—The commonwealth's ensign floated over the Revere house yesterday, where the governor and the leaders of the Democratic party banqueted, the day being the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans. Jackson shared the honors in the speaking with Butler. Previous to the banquet the state committee organized by re-electing Col. French chairman and the other officers of last year.

At the dinner the staple topic was Butler for president, and it was very noticeable that the general gave no sign of displeasure at the mention of his name. Col. French said that Butler had all the qualites which made Jackson famous, but in a higher degree.

INDIANA.

Proceedings in the Senate---The House Committees.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 9.—In the state senate, a resolution of Senator Spann, providing for a committee to investigate the affairs of the new state house, was defeated by the Democrats, who want the investigation to be placed in the hands of the regular committee on public building, of which Mr. Willard is chairman. A large number of bills were read a first time and referred. Among the most important of these was one by Senator Benz, repealing the present road law and re-enacting the one in operation previous to last session. Senator Campbell, of St. Joseph county, intoduced a bill providing for a commission of three members, to be appointed by the governor, who shall regulate the railroad traffic of the state, fixing freight and passenger rates, and making contracts between roads. The bill is similar in its provisions to the Georgia law. Senator Hutchinson, of La Porte county, introduced a bill for an appropriation of $33,000 for the construction of a sewer from the state prison at Michigan City to the harbor, its passage being requested all by the citizens and officials of that place.

In the house the speaker announced the standing committees, the principal chairmanships being the following: Judiciary, McMullen, of Dearborn county; ways and means, Jewett, of Scott; fees and salaries, Moody, of DeKalb; temperance, Gibson, of Clark; prisons, Smith, of Blackford. Wilson, of Marion, heads the list on benevolent institutions, and is second on the judiciary. The remainder of the day was devoted to the introduction of bills, the most important being that of Mr. Jewett, appropriating $60,000 for the completion of the female department of the insane asylum, and by Wilson, reorganizing the benevolent institutions and giving the power of appointment of members of the boards to the governor. This is the measure advocated by President Fishback, of the boards, who by it expects to retain his position, but Senator Brown and others are making a strong fight agaings him and the bill.

WISCONSIN.

Probability of a Dead-Lock in the Organization of the Assembly.

MADISON, Jan. 9.—The political clans are coming in fast. There was talk last evening that there was some reason to believe there would be a lock in the assembly organization. It is said enough Independents will operate by themselves to make the contest between the Democrats and Republicans even, providing two members on the Democratic side remain sick, as they are now and unable to come. Col. E. A. Calkins, of Milwaukee, comes out with a heavy backing for chief clerk of the assembly. The third house is very strong this year. If there should be no lock it is the general impression that Finch, of Oshkosh, will be speaker. The contest for chief clerk in the assembly will be spirited. The candidates for sergeant-at-arms increase daily. There will be no contest in the senate for chief clerkship. C. E. Bross will receive nearly the whole vote of the Republicans on the first ballot. S. K. Dunn, of Juneau, A. D. Thorp of Door, and A. S. Glaze, of Waupaca, will be the contestants for sergeant-at-arms.

A Narrow Escape.

DETROIT, Jan. 9.—What was known as the Telegraph block, on the corner of Griswold and Congress streets, was ruined by fire last evening. At the first alarm twenty-five employes of the Western Union company found their means of escape cut off, but all were fortunate enough to reach the ground by the firemen's ladders.

The Massachusetts Senatorship.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—It is reported that Congressman Crapo has written urging his friends not to consider him a candidate for senator, and throwing his influence in favor of Hon. George F. Hoar. Mr. Hoar's friends are working for him now day and night, though with the utmost quiet and the senator is making himself as conspicuous as possible at Washington. Ex-Gov. Long has gone to Maine, leaving no organization at work in his behalf. State Senator Bates of Brookfield, is running Mr. Hoar's canvass, with the aid of Mr. Parker C. Chandler, a young Republican of this city, and the loyal party press is, with hardly any exceptions, booming lustily for the Worcester statesman. The fact that his friends feel pretty safe may be indicated from the fact that the opposition Republican senators were pretty generally snubbed this afternoon by President Crocker in making up his committees. The opposition shows no indication as yet of consolidating or organizing, and the date for the proposed conference has not been fixed. The complexion of the contest has not changed, Mr. Hoar still having the call. The balloting will begin on Tuesday of next week.

THE MELVILLES.

Their Family Skeleton Disinterred and Dragged Into a Philadelphia Court.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—There was a great crowd in the court room at Media yesterday. Engineer Melville, of the Arctic steamer Jeannette, was there. So were Mrs. Melville and her three children. Engineer Melville had applied for a writ of habeas corpus to get possession of his children. The answer to the writ was read charging that Melville was not a fit man to have charge of the children. Then the engineer was called to the stand. Counsel for Mrs. Melville objected to his taking the oath because of his infidelity. Melville said he believed in a God as commonly accepted, and he was sworn. He testified that, during the last three years, while he was absent on the Jeannette expedition, he had allowed his wife $90 a month for her support and the use of the house at Sharon Hill. During the last thirteen months his wife had succeeded in drawing an additional $50 a month. On his recent return home he discovered that he was $1,500 in debt for bills contracted and borrowed money. The trouble with his wife began in 1860. His family was residing in Bristol, and notice of the number of debts which she had incurred reached him while on duty on the Penobscot, as far back as 1877. On his arrival home after a long absence his wife told him that she had been accused by the neighbors of being addicted to drink, and asked him if he could believe it. He said that he would not until he should see proof of it. One Sunday morning, afterward, his wife offered to caress him, when be detected the smell of liquor on her breath. He told her to go away. On another occasion, when the engineer returned from a trial trip on which he had gone that morning, she met him at the railway station, and on the way back to the house she fell down, and he and a friend assisted her home. This was also attributed to intoxication. Speaking of the circumstances surrounding his return from the late Arctic expedition, Mr Melville said immediately on his arrival in New York he was tendered a public reception there, and accepted a similar invitation in this city, arriving here late in the afternoon. The entertainment was given that evening, and the following evening he was to be greeted on his return to Sharon Hill with an illumination and a reception at his house. Reaching there, he was met at the door by his daughter Maude, who threw her arms about him and kissed him. Taking his two younger children by the hand, he entered the house in search of his wife, whom he found in the dining-room. Her hair was disheveled, and her whole appearance indicated great disorder of mind and body. The first thing she said was: "George, are you glad to see me?" "No," was the reply, "I am not." "Well, then, all is over," said Mrs. Melville; "go out and see your friends." In the dining-room was a crowd of people eating and drinking. He became tired of it, and went out, hoping they would disperse. An hour later he returned and closed the house up, and went up-stairs. His wife said: "George, don't disgrace me." "Disgrace be damned!" was the reply. "There is more disgrace here than I have ever seen before, and this great crowd of people who came here to honor me have witnessed my disgrace." Then he went on to tell how he returned to the parlor and his wife, very much excited, threatened to shoot him, and fire the house. He left the house, and spent the night at a neighbor's. Dr Longstreth, at his suggestion, certified to Mrs. Melville's insanity, and she was taken to the asylum at Norristown. He had not seen her since. Dr. Longstreth testified regarding the certificate, and Mary Bennett, a servant, testified that Mrs. Melville drank a good deal of whisky. Zenia Spencer, another servant, corroborated this. A neighbor and two small boys told him they had seen Mrs. Melville under the influence of liquor, and the case terminated for the day. Nearly a dozen more witnesses will be called to-day for the engineer.

NEBRASKA.

A View of the Senatorial Contest.

LINCOLN, Jan. 9.—Senator Saunders expressed to a correspondent last evening perfect satisfaction as to his own prospects in the senatorial contest, and said the events of the last twenty-four hours had given him greater reason than ever to be hopeful. This refers, of course, to private relations, for no outward movement in the legislature has taken place, nor can any specified support yet be assigned to any candidate. Corwin is developing unexpected strength, and, backed by Congressman Laird, will make a strong fight. Thayer is another absent candidate, and had to count on Hill and Howard counties. Conner is antagonizing Butler, who is reported to have lost strength with the Anti-Monopolists since his bold and decided stand with the Republicans of the senate, but Butler holds many old-time friends. Judge Dundy would not deny to a correspondent that he was a candidate. Of all men Millard is considered the strongest, and has done the most work since his arrival. A Democrat was heard to say he would like to support Millard, because from his successful career as a financier he would take an interest in and be of use to financial legislation in congress. Wealthy western stock men and a large Omaha lobby are backing him. The Democrats have secured rooms down town for headquarters. They will organize and perhaps caucus. They propose to unite on one man, and by hanging to him succeed. They count twenty-five in the house and twelve (including five delegates, Anti-Monopolists,) in the senate, which is a fair balance of power, and by unanimous action could effect something. Sterling Morton is the first choice and Judge Savage the second, but the Democrats could vote most solidly on Judge Boyd, mayor of Omaha. Charles Brown, from Douglas, is a Democratic candidate, and a strong man.

"LUCKY'S" ILL LUCK.

Baldwin Must Lose His Arm, and Probably His Life.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—"Lucky" Baldwin, who was shot by a young woman Thursday morning, is lying in a critical condition. Physicians decided not to probe for the ball, which is believed to be lodged in the wrist. The ball took a curious course down the arm, but broke no bone. The main trouble is that the bullet carried some shreds of the coat into the wound, and these, it is feared, have already caused blood poisoning. The doctors say that Baldwin must lose his arm if his life is to be saved. What makes hopes of his recovery slender is that he is an old man and has lived a hard life. His blood is bad, and the chances are that blood poisoning will be followed by gangrene. Some of the best medical skill in the city is in attendance on the sick millionaire. Meanwhile Verona Baldwin, the woman who fired the shot, lies in a cell in the city prison.

LATER.—"Lucky" Baldwin is out of danger. Fanny, or Verona, Baldwin was held to answer by a police judge to the charge of assault with intent to murder, in the sum of $5,000.

ILLINOIS.

The Race for the Senatorship---Light Work in Both Houses.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 9.—The absentees come in slowly. It is expected that to-day will see a full representation. A shrewd observer, who has had a good deal of experience at Springfield, figures the first vote in the caucus thus: Cullom, 40; Oglesby, 28; Raum, 23; Henderson, 10; Rinaker, 7.

This estimate is based on the supposition that every Republican goes into the caucus, which is not a sure thing by any means. Thus far but little animosity has been shown between the friends of the rival candidates, and there is no special reason to expect a bolt from the caucus nominee. It is thought highly probable, however, that some half dozen Republican members will stay away from the caucus, on the ground that they are not specially partial to the candidates.

The opponents of Governor Cullom are having the procedings of the constitutional convention of 1870 carefully ransacked in the hope of finding something going to show that the framers of the present constitution of Illinois intended to exclude governors from senatorial contests. So far as heard from the search has not been very successful.

The Raum men say that Cullom has his retainers from among the commissioners of the various state institutions, while the Cullom and Oglesby men say that Raum has a horde of revenue agents working with might and main for their boss. "Uncle Dick" Oglesby stands free from this imputation, but labors under the charge that he has had honors enough, and that he made a much better general and governor than he did a senator. General Henderson is making a very quiet canvass, and has the kindly feelings of all toward him. The feeling that no one of the present candidates would be the nominee has passed away, and the appearance of things is that the fight will soon narrow down to two candidates, Cullam and Oglesby.

The Democrats have begun to think of complimenting somebody, and the names of General John M. Palmer, the Hon. Carter Harrison, the Hon. William Morrison, and General John C. Black, are discussed as fit subjects for eulogy and a display of Bourbon oratory. A gentleman named Durbin, from Chicago, arrived here last night with a little boom for Charles Farwell. Mr. Durbin labors under the disadvantage of being a stranger to most of the assembly, which may account in some measure for the uncertainity of his chances.

There was no quorum present when the lieutenant governor called the senate to order, and in consequence an adjournment was taken until this morning at 10 o'clock.

The house, or rather a dozen members, met at 1 p. m. Pearson of Madison, presented the first bill of the assembly, being an appropriation measure setting apart the sum of $5,000 for the contingent expenses of the season. It was sent to second reading and the body adjourned.

A BAD BREAK.

Senator Hoar Makes a Personal Allusion which Brings Senator Edmunds to Tears.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Senator Edmunds left the senate yesterday choking afternoon with emotion. The drift of debate was strongly in favor of the Hoar bill. It had been thought that a vote could be had upon the bill and the measure passed. This was deemed the more important from the fact that the tariff discussion will begin Wednesday; that there is another special order for to-day, and that the days between now and the 4th of March are rapidly passing. It accordingly was with much annoyance that the friends of the bill saw Mr. Edmunds rise about the time for the usual dinner hour, with books and papers about him which indicated the preparation for one of his protracted constitutional arguments, and Mr. Hoar could easily be pardoned a little impatience when he suggested that Mr. Edmunds might well have made his objections known earlier in the session, and not imperil the chances of the bill at this late hour by opposing it. Nothing was further from Mr. Hoar's thoughts or from the mind of any one in the senate chamber than to wound the feelings of the senator from Vermont, but the allusion to his negligence evidently carried the mind of Mr. Edmunds to the Green hill in Vermont where his daughter lies buried, and to the fact that he was absent from the senate most of the summer in the vain endeavor to keep alive in her the faint spark of life. Mr. Edmunds was able only to say that Mr. Hoar had made a personal allusion to him, and left the chamber with choking utterance, quite overcome. The incident was a touching one; it instantly softened the asperities which had been excited by the protracted debate and the prospect of a long argument at dinner-time, and the senate instantly adjourned.

KANSAS.

Inauguration of Gov. Glick---The Standing of the Senate and House---The Senatorship.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 9.—George W. Glick was inaugurated governor about noon yesterday, in the presence of the retiring Gov. St. John, the outgoing state officers, and a great crowd of people who assembled to witness the ceremony. Gov. St. John made a brief speech on retiring, and Gov. Glick delivered a short address, in which he stated he should strive to govern not alone those who gave him their suffrages, but all the people of the state. A reception was then held and a great number of people present were introduced to the governor.

The following is believed to be the political standing of the senate and house: Republican, 114; Democrats, 26; Greenbackers, 12; Independent Republicans, 13; total, 165.

The senatorial question has excited but little interest, for the reason that there are no candidates thus far announced against Senator Preston B. Plumb, present incumbent. Although St. John, the Republican nominee for governor, was defeated by eight thousand plurality, yet the regular Republican state ticket and members of the legislature received the bulk of the Republican vote of the state. The senate, which was elected two years ago, is claimed to stand twenty-seven for Plumb's re-election to thirteen not committed to any candidate. Those who are in a position to know state that the house is largely committed to the support of Mr. Plumb, and that upon the whole he will have an easy victory.

The British Postoffice.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The energetic action of the British government makes the postoffice the most comprehensive beneficence of a popular age, at once two-penny post, newspaper free, return carrier, telegraph instrumentality and and savings bank. It has finally struck at, not the express business merely, but at the private parcel and railroad parcel collections, and shilling shopping packages are sent all over the kingdom, called for, forwarded and carried to the door. Immediately, or before the work has commenced, all the trunk line railroads have dropped rates, and begun to deliver seven-pound parcels for thirty miles at twelve cents.

Dakota's Settlement and Progress.

WATERTOWN, Dak., Jan. 8.—Reports from the various land offices give an aggregate of 23,000 homestead and pre-emption entries in Dakota during the year 1882, not counting the Black Hills land district. Counting three persons to each entry, there has been an increase in Dakota's population during 1882 of 100,000.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Against the Bankrupt Law---Bills in the House to Increase Postal Facilities.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Yesterday Mr. Pendleton presented a memorial of Cincinnati merchants against the national bankrupt law.

At the close of the morning hour, the bill to afford relief to congress and the departments in investigating claims came up as unfinished business.

Mr. Brown addressed the senate until 2 o'clock, when consideration of the presidential succession bill was resumed.

After a lengthy debate, and without reaching a vote, the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Under the call of states, Mr. Anderson of Kansas introduced a bill to create a postal telegraph; also for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri at Leavenworth.

Mr. Holman one providing that persons who present claims in which a misrepresentation of facts appears, shall not be entitled to payment.

Mr. Robinson of New York one to reduce letter postage to 1 cent.

Mr. Murch, as a question of privilege, introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five members to investigate the charges made on the floor, that John Bailey, chief clerk of the house, was acting in the interest of the Washington Gas Light company, and influencing congressional action. A discussion ensued, Messrs. Robinson, Klotz, Murch, Hazelton and others taking part. Mr. Robinson finally made a point of order that the resolution was not based on a specific charge.

Mr. Blount of Georgia, opposed the point of order; he would not stand on technicalities in a case of this sort.

Mr. Hazelton defended Mr. Bailey, and Murch contended that the allegations had been made, and he believed them to be true.

Mr. Robinson said if the gentleman would stop there, he would withdraw the point of order.

Mr. Murch agreed to do so, and the resolution was adopted.

Notice was given of a request to be made to eulogize the late Senator Hill on the 25th, and the late Representative Orth on the 31st instant.

The house then resumed consideration of the shipping bill, Mr. Regan taking the floor.

The bill went over, after discussion, without action.

Mr. Crowley of New York, introduced a bill authorizing the Niagara River Bridge company to construct a bridge over Niagara river; referred.

Adjourned.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE.

And Three Cheers for Mrs. Michael Corbett.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Michael Corbett, of 546 West Fifty-fourth street, presented three daughters to her husband a few nights since. Last evening Mrs. Corbett introduced a reporter to the babies. The trio were quietly sleeping in a bed at the left of their mother, who was looking well, and was quite conversational. "The doctor says they are the healthiest and finest babies he has ever seen," she said, bestowing a side glance of admiration and affection upon the three. "They weigh six pounds apiece."

The husband held a lamp over the bed so that a better view of the infants could be obtained. He said: "We had to tie ribbons on their wrists to distinguish them when we had them christened on Friday morning. The one with the red ribbon is Mary Cecilia; the one with the white is Catharine Agnes, and the one with the blue is Ellen Gertrude."

INDIAN SUMMER.

After October's biting frost it seems
That summer days return. The partridge whirs
A noisy wing to ambush in the firs;
And for a while the sun retricks his beams.
It is an autumn that of spring-time dreams.
The warm breeze comes again, and softly stirs
The silent tree-tops, and the empty burs
Which, loosened, drop into the leaf-clogged streams.
Ah! dear, this tardy sunshine, and the last!
So shall we find—our summer being past,
And hoar-frost with us—for a little breath
So fair a country, such a genial air;
And shall forget our woes, and unaware
Step over to the border-land of death!

PHŒBE'S SPECULATION.

It was my first case of importance, and I had taken it on speculation. If I succeeded, it would not only be a feather in my cap, but a neat sum in my pocket; if I didn't, it would be at the cost of a deal of labor wasted and a sound legal drubbing at the hands of Naboth Twyscott, who appeared on the other side.

The fight was long and bitter, but ended in a swinging verdict for my client.

"Will Jundle pay up, or shall I issue an execution?" I asked Twyscott, a little jubilantly, as we left the court-room.

With the tip of his right forefinger, Twyscott pulled down his left under eyelid, and with a tantalizing wink inquired:

"Do you see anything green, Mr. Craye?"

Next day he filed a motion for a new trial on forty-seven several grounds. The Judge, after hearing argument, overruled the motion. But Twyscott didn't surrender. He appealed from court to court till he reached the last; and it was not till he had been beaten through them all, and his last legal gun had been spiked, that he suffered his client to pay.

It was too late to put the money in the bank the day Jundle paid it over. Of course he had hung back till the last minute. However, it was not a very bulky roll, being all in thousand-dollar notes; so I just slipped it into a secret pocket of my coat, where it would be safe till morning.

We lived, my wife and I, in a snug little cottage near the city. We had been married not quite a year. In fact, it was mainly on the strength of my expectations from "the case," which had then reached a point at which Twyscott was only fighting for delay, that I had ventured to ask Phœbe Harland to complete our somewhat long-standing engagement.

I had promised Phœbe so many things out of the case that I had forgotten half of them; but there was little doubt that strict account of them was laid away in her own memory, and I feared that the sum total would make a large hole in my share of the spoils.

I know it was a mean thing, and I can hardly think what put it into my head, for I fully intended to deal squarely by Phœbe: but on the train homeward it somehow occurred to me that there was no need of hurry in telling her I had got the money. It would do as well after I had settled with my client, and knew exactly how I stood.

Phœbe met me so lovingly, and had such a nice little supper waiting—just the dishes she knew I liked best—and was so chatty and pleasant all the evening, that I wonder how I kept the guilty secret, but somehow I did keep it.

I was awakened next morning by a messenger with a telegram summoning me at once to town to draw Mr. Banton's will. I hastened to catch the early train, which I was just in time to do. Mr. Banton was a rich, retired merchant whose patronage was not to be neglected.

Instead of finding him in extremis, I was not a little surprised at seeing Mr. Banton, in dressing-gown and slippers, enjoying a hearty breakfast. Of course he didn't need my services. He had, in fact, been worse scared than hurt:

It was not till I had reached my office that I noticed I had on a different coat from that worn the day before, which, being a little the worse for use, Phœbe had strongly objected to my wearing of late. More than once she had threatened to sell it to the rag-man. She must have slipped another in its place the night before, and in the hurry of my morning toilet I had failed to note the change.

I was a little annoyed when, at a later hour, my client, Jonas Swirl, called to settle and get his share of the money. He was a very suspicious person, and when I explained the change of coats and the absence of the cash, I fancied he looked just a trifle distrustful. Still, he said nothing, and went away promising to come back to-morrow.

I hardly stopped to return Phœbe's kiss that evening before running up to the closet to look for my old coat. It was not there. I tossed everything upside down; rummaged all the drawers, searched every hook and peg, but the missing garment was nowhere visible.

"Phœbe!" I cried, running down to the dining-room, where she was busy preparing tea—"Phœbe! where's the coat I wore yesterday?"

"That old one?"

"Old or new, where is it?" I demanded.

I'm afraid I seemed to speak harshly, but I was only excited.

Phœbe looked scared. I had never addressed her so before.

"Forgive me, George," she faltered.

"Forgive you for what?"

"I—I—there was a peddler come along to-day, and—and I exchanged your old coat—you know it wasn't fit to wear any longer, dear—for a pair of the loveliest little flower vases—I've been waiting for you to notice them, but—but—"

My looks must have terrified her, for she burst into tears, sobbing out:

"I didn't think you would mind it, George."

Poor Phœbe, it was the first time I had made her cry; and after all I had only my own selfish folly to blame. Why hadn't I told her about the money?

Taking her to my arms and kissing away her tears:

"Never mind, darling," I said, "don't cry about the coat; but do you know which way the peddler went?"

My kind words reassured her. The smile came back to her face, but the question about the peddler puzzled her.

"I didn't notice which way he went," she answered; "but since you don't mind about the coat, what difference does it make, dear?"

I didn't care to explain the mighty difference it made; for I saw it would break Phœbe's heart to know the truth, and could do no good.

After tea I went out on some pretext, and made such inquiries as I could with prudence; but though I found some who had seen the peddler, none could give me any clew to him or whither he had gone.

Phœbe was delighted with her vases; and of course, I had to admire them, too—though I confess it would have afforded me greater satisfaction to have smashed them over the confounded peddler's head.

I spent a sleepless night; though I managed to keep Phœbe from observing my distress. It would be time enough to vex her with the truth when there would be no other course left.

Making an excuse for another early start, I got to town by the first morning train.

I notified the police, and spoke of advertising; but that would never do, the superintendent said. As the money was in a hidden pocket, the only hope lay in finding the coat before the presence of the notes was discovered. Whatever search was made must be prosecuted secretly. Giving the best description of the peddler I had been able to obtain, I went to my office with a heavy heart. What should I do when Jonas Swirl came for his money? He would never believe my story, and Heaven only knew what harsh measures he might choose to take.

"Want any pens, sir?" inquired some one entering the door to which my back was turned.

"No!" I answered gruffly, without looking up.

"Some ink?—some blotting-paper?—some soap?—some matches?—some—"

Not caring to hear the inventory finished, I turned to request the man to leave. But—I didn't. He had on my own old coat, more attractive to my eyes, just then, than the richest royal robe!

"How would you like to sell that coat you have on?" I asked as unconcernedly as possible.

The man smiled as one might at what he thought a very poor joke.

"Or may be you'd exchange it for the one I wear?" I added, quickly.

"You're hardly in earnest, sir."

"Indeed I am," I said; "I fancy the cut of yours, and here's mine—come, even up and no higgling!"

The coat which I drew off and thrust into his hands was quite new, and worth many times that for which I offered to exchange it. I was evidently taken for a lunatic, but that didn't balk the peddlers's greed for a good bargain. The barter was completed and the man hurried off, probably fearing the return of a lucid interval in which I might seek to cancel the trade.

But I followed at his heels, keeping him in sight till I had searched the secret pocket where I found the money all safe!

And I found it just in time, too, for before many minutes Jonas Swirl came as he had promised. Our settlement was soon completed, and each had his own share to do what he would with.

Phœbe was surprised to see me in my old coat, but when I told her all, and saw how white and scared she looked, I was glad I had waited till there was only good news to tell her.—N. Y. Ledger.

An Enterprising Boy.

The Standard Oil Company, the only concern in the world that is powerful enough to compel the combined trunk-line railroads to do its bidding, demanding and receiving from them rates which made opposition impossible and crushed out every rival, has lately been beaten by a messenger boy. In the history of the Standard this is the only time it has ever been outwitted. Tom Scott, when alive and President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was outgeneraled by the Standard. Vanderbilt and his allies were not a match for Rockefeller, and they were compelled to allow him rebates which enabled him to build up the greatest monopoly the world has ever known. When he got ready he laid a pipe line of his own from the oil regions to Cleveland in one direction, and from the oil regions to the seaboard in another direction, and then told the trunk-line managers who had enriched him that they could go to that place where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. But this man with his millions has been outwitted by Mike Keating, sixteen years old, a messenger boy of the Western Union Telegraph Company, at Oil City. Mike has been in the employ of the Telegraph Company since he was old enough to carry dispatches, and nearly all of this time he has been in the oil exchange at Oil City, carrying messages to and from the brokers. The large operators in petroleum send their dispatches in cipher. The boy has carried so many messages sent by the Standard from its headquarters at Cleveland that he had unraveled the mystic characters and could read them like a printed page. Just prior to the recent extraordinary advance in the petroleum market, when the price jumped in a few days from fifty cents to $1.35, Keating carried a number of telegrams to the Standard's brokers ordering them to buy large blocks of oil. The monopoly had laid its plans to boom the market, and its Oil City brokers were ordered to buy everything. "Buy half a million barrels," "but a million barrels," "buy two million barrels," were the way these orders came in. They were riddles to all but the brokers who received them and Mike Keating, the messenger boy who delivered them. Keating, although a mere boy, knew something extraordinary was soon to happen. The market, which had been a stagnant pool for a year, was already creeping up the scale. Orders for immense blocks of oil were still coming from the Standard's headquarters. There was no time to lose. But what could a boy do without a dollar in his pocket? Keating went to one of the largest operators on the floor of the exchange, outside of the Standard's agents, and told him he had a "pointer." The broker laughed at him. The boy's earnestness finally commanded attention, and the broker agreed to his proposition, which was that the broker should furnish money for a "deal," if he felt satisfied with the information, and divide the profits equally. Then the messenger told the broker what he had, and of the telegrams he had been carrying from the Standard's Cleveland office. The next message that fell into the boy's hands was carried secretly to the broker and translated. It was an order to buy everything that was offered. The broker probably swallowed to keep his heart down; any way, he went back to the exchange and began to buy. He saw the Standard's agents buying right and left, and was satisfied a big deal was in progress. He took everything he could get until he had a round million barrels. The market was already jumping fast, and his million barrels had been secured at an average cost of 72 cents. He was loaded to the guards. Orders to buy and orders to sell were pouring in from every quarter, and the excitement was becoming intense. The market was still bounding upward, with the usual fluctuations. Every time the price advanced a cent or declined a cent, the broker saw a profit or a loss of $10,000. He kept his head, however, and when the market scored above 80 cents he began to unload. The Standard men were on hand to take everything, and he got rid of all his oil at an average price of 80 cents a barrel. He had bought at 72, and his profits were therefore eight cents a barrel or $80,000 in all. He divided equally with Mike Keating, the messenger boy who had unraveled the Standard's cipher, according to agreement. It is well enough to remember that oil touched $1.35 during this ten days' spurt, and if the broker had held on until the top was reached the profits of the two would have been $630,000.

It goes without saying that the Standard Oil Company has a new cipher and one messenger boy is out of a job.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sad End of Merry-Making.

Information was received yesterday of a curious as well as sensational suicide which took place Thursday at Buckatunna, a station on the Mobile & Ohio Road, in Wayne County, Miss. T. A. Cox, a young man employed as book-keeper by Mr. D. Smith, a merchant of Buckatunna, attended a party in the neighborhood Thursday and danced with the young ladies until midnight. He remarked once or twice to his partners in the dance that he would die that night after the dancing was concluded. About one o'clock, when the participants in the entertainment were getting ready to go home young Cox called their attention to the way he had arranged the chairs around the room, and how he had placed one chair in the centre and covered it with a shawl. He requested the ladies to be seated. One of the ladies took the centre seat, but he asked her to seat herself elswhere, as that particular chair was reserved for himself.

After all had taken their places he seated himself in their centre, and placing his hand in the bosom of his coat, remarked that he would certainly die before day, and desired the present witnesses to stay with him until the end was reached. He said he had been raised well by his mother, who had sent him to Sunday-school and tried to make a good Christian of him, but in spite of her care he had strayed from the paths of duty and could never face his mother again. He then drew a pistol from an inside pocket, and saying, "This never fails," placed the muzzle against his ear and fired. The spectators were taken so entirely by surprise that they could make no movement to prevent the rash act, and it was not until his hand dropped into his lap and the pistol fell to the floor that they fully realized the horrible deed which had been committed. When the gentlemen rushed to the centre of the room they found the young man dead. It appears that Cox posted the books the day before and made a full and correct account to his employer. The Coroner held the inquest and turned the body over to Mr. Smith. The latter provided a casket and paid all the expenses of preparing and shipping the remains to the suicide's mother, who lives up on the Montgomery Railroad.—Mobile (Ala.) Register.

—Pickens County, Ala., is so overwhelmingly in debt that property has decreased in value until it is almost impossible to give it away. A few days ago 865 acres of fine timber land and a mill in good condition brought but $210, the effects of the condition of affairs in the county.

Milton Nobles in "Interviews."

Milton Nobles, the excellent comedian, who has twice visited Janesville, will appear at Myers opera house this evening in Interviews. It is a good piece, as will be seen from the following notice taken from the St. Louis Post Dispatch:

Interviews, or Bright Bohemia, will prove a popular success. The first production of this new play took place at the Grand opera house last evening, and its reception by the large audience left no doubt of the emphatic hit it made. Milton Nobles, who is the author of the piece, of course was the star, and as "the born Bohemian" journalist, and professional interviewer, instantly leaped into the favor of the audience. The character of "Quillford Driverton," the journalist, is played in Mr. Nobles' characteristic vein, quietly, but effectively, and the action was rewarded by an enthusiastic call before the curtain. Credit is due Mr. Nobles for his clever literary work. The dialogue is often brilliant, pungent, and caustic, and the plan is ample for the necessities of the idea. Mr. Nobles can congratulate himself upon last night's success.

The Consumption of Gas, and Comparative Prices.

The amount paid by the city for gas used in the street lamps during 1882, was $1,797.26. The lighting and extinguishing cost, $629, and washing lamps, $21. The total number of street lamps in the city is 136, and the average number lighted during the year was 133. The lamps were lighted 243 nights, and the cost per lamp including gas, lighting, extinguishing and cleaning, was $18.40. The gas for the engine houses and city hall for the past year cost $137.60. The price of gas to the city is $2.00 per thousand, and to private consumers only $2.30.

When they began to talk of lighting the city by electric light, and experiments were to be made in several business houses of the city, the editor of the Gazette began to enquire into the relative price of gas in the cities of the northwest, and especially the price paid by the gas-burning cities of this state and northern Illinois. The investigation has been an interesting one to him and will be alike interesting to the people of Janesville. The inquiry settled one important fact, and that is that gas consumers in this city pay less for their gas than those in any city in the northwest, with the exception of Milwaukee where it is only five cents a thousand cheaper. Down in Beloit they pay $3.30 per 1000, one dollar more than it is in Janesville. In Fond du Lac the price is $3.00 and for street lamps, $2 50. In Madison the price is $3.50 per 1000, and the price paid for street lamps is $3.00. Oshkosh pays $3.00, and Racine $2.50. In Milwaukee, where coal is much cheaper than in Janesville, and where more than ten times the quantity of gas is made, the price is $2.25, only five cents lower than the price in this city. Even in Chicago, where they have the important advantage of cheap coal and a heavy consumption of gas, the price in one part of the city is up to $2.25, only five cents cheaper than here, while in other parts of the city private consumers pay from $2.50 to $3.00, and the city from $2.00 to $2.50. In Rockford they pay $2.50 for gas, and in Elgin $3.00. The investigation made shows that with the exception of Milwaukee and part of Chicago, there is not a city in all the northwest so highly favored as regard the low price of gas as Janesville. This is credit to the gas company of this city, and a substantial benefit to our gas consumers.

A Queer Mistake.

There was considerable excitement at the home of Dr. E. E. Loomis last evening. The doctor and Mrs. Loomis were out to spend the evening, and had left the house in charge of Mrs. Loomis' father and mother. They had left a bright fire burning in the grate in the dining room and retired to the sitting room for the evening. At about eight o'clock, some ladies who chanced to pass the house on the east side, noticed a bright light reflecting upon the large windows of that part of the house and imagined the house to be on fire. They immediately gave the alarm to the neighbors; the other portions of the house on that side being in darkness, they supposed the doctor's family were all away from home. A gentleman who resides near by, and who by the way, is better posted in naval warfare than in fighting fire, was the first to respond, and upon arriving at the Doctor's residence, without any formality, commenced battling down the door leading to the room in which the bright fire was burning in the grate. The old lady and gentleman who were enojying their quiet evening in the adjoining room were terribly frightened, as the racket at the door increased, and with the aid of the little house dog, went to the scene of the disturbance. As he arrived in the dinning room bang! bang! bang! came something against the door, with the force of a gigantic battering ram, and in came the panels! The old man saw a large foot and a portion of a human leg protruding through the broken door, and then the noise ceased. The little dog, nearly frightened to death, hid himself beneath a sofa, and the old gentleman stooped down to the broken door and exclaimed, "What do you want? What are you breaking in the door for?" But he was more astonished when he recognized the intruder's face, who also had stooped down to look through the broken door. The impromptu fireman endeavored to explain, but words failed him, and he started for his home. He soon returned, however, and made all things right; and concluded hereafter that before he knocked down another door he would be certain that there was a cause for it.

The violin is making headway among ladies. The number of those who study this instrument is constantly on the increase. It is but about thirty-five years since the sisters Millanolo startled the world with their artistic violin playing. How the question of the propriety of a lady playing the violin was then discussed. Despite the fact that everybody seemed pleased with the sight of those two dark eyed, dark-haired Italian girls handling the violin, the ladies of Europe seemed to be afraid to follow their example. But things have changed since then. Now, there is, says a writer, hardly a large family in and about London, blessed with a goodly number of girls, in which at least one of them is not learning to play the violin. The same writer observes, that he often attends musicals, and frequently finds the violin in the hands of ladies. Only recently we received a programme of a concert given by one of Mr. Eichberg's violin classes. The fact that ladies names predominated on the list of pupils, attracted our attention, and we counted their number. Though we have forgotten the exact figures, and have not now the list at our command, we feel sure that we are not far from the truth when we set the number of lady violinists at twenty-six, and that of the gentlemen at about eight or ten. This shows what progress the violin is making among women. English dealers in instruments say, that they sell more violins to ladies than to gentlemen.—Exchange,

The County Board of Supervisors.

The board of supervisors of Rock county convened in the county clerk's office at the court house, at two o'clock this afternoon, Mr. J. C. Metcalf, chairman of the board, in the chair, and all the members being present. The chairman, in a feeling manner, announced the death of Mr. S. H. Slaymaker, member of the board from the town of Turtle, and suggested that the board take some appropriate action in relation thereto.

On motion of Mr. Keeler, a committee of three was appointed to report resolutions expressing the sympathy of the board in relation to the death of Mr. Slaymaker. The chair appointed Messrs. Keeler, Menzies and Gardner as such committee. The committee retired, and in a few minutes returned and reported the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from us our late associate and friend Samuel H. Slaymaker, and

WHEREAS, The pleasant relations long held by the members of this board with our deceased associate, render it proper that we should place on record our appreciation of his services and many merits as a man, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the Divine will, we do not the less mourn our loss, and that in the death of Samuel H. Slaymaker, the county of Rock loses a faithful steward of all public interests intrusted to his care, the citizens of his town, and all who knew him, an honest and upright man, always ready to aid in the promotion of every good cause.

Resolved, That the board of supervisors of Rock county tender their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved widow and relatives of our deceased friend in this, their deep sorrow and affliction; and that we also indulge with them in the hope that their loss and ours, is his infinite gain.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of this board; and that the clerk be requested to forward a copy of the same to the family of our deceased associate.

[Signed] C. C. KEELER,
JAMES MENZIES,
WM. GARDNER,
Committee.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Mr. Ward, from the building committee, made a written report of the work done by that committee; and also recommending certain needed improvements at the county poor house, at the county jail, and at the county insane asylum. The report was received, and its further consideration made the special order for 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. Brownell, from the committee on settlement with county officers, reported that they had examined the books of the county treasury and found the same correct; also the county clerk's account and found the same correct; the superintendents of poor and found them correct.

Mr. Greenman moved that the report be received and placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Brownell a committee of one was appointed to cancel the county order by burning. Adopted, and Mr. Brownell was appointed as such committee.

The board were still in session at three o'clock.

Lima Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

LIMA CENTER, Jan. 8, 1883.

The eleventh annual meeting of the town of Lima mutual fire insurance company, was held at this place on January 2nd, 1883. The former board of directors was reelected, with the exception of Mr. Henry J. Wilkinson, who has served the company well and faithfully in the capacity of secretary and treasurer over since its organization in 1872. Mr. W. being about to move to Whitewater, Fred Gould was elected in his stead. George Gleason, William Alexander, Ezra Saxe, E. L. Burdick and Fred Gould now comprise the board of directors, of which Mr. Burdick is president, Mr. Gould Secretary, and Mr. Gleason surveyor or agent. And now, Messrs Editors, if you will please allow me a little space in your columns, I have Mr. Wilkinson's kind permission to quote from his report for the last year, in order that the multitude of readers of the Gazette may compare the cost of town insurances for a length of time with that of the old stock companies. He says: "In closing this my eleventh and last annual report as secretary of this company, allow me to review briefly its history and career. * * * * * The first public meeting at which any definite action was taken was held at Lima Center May 4th, 1872, with Dr. H. H. Judd as chairman, and Fred Gould as secretary. There was general interest manifested, and the work went on, and policy No. 1 was issued to H. J. Wilkinson bearing date June 25, 1872. Twenty-two of the thirty men to whom the first 30 policies were issued hold policies in the company to-day and the property insured in those thirty policies is insured in the company to-day except in two cases, at the time of our organization nearly all the insurable property in the town was insured in the large companies. The most of such insurance expired by its own limitation. For the last six years the insurable property in the town has practically been insured in this company. Now for results. To ascertain the exact cost of insuring property in this company for a series of years (taking the word exact in its strictest sense) would necessitate more labor than I have time to perform. But the course I have taken is nearly enough exact for any and all practical purposes and certainly exact enough for theoretical speculations. If we take the average amount of insurance carried by the company each year and charge this amount with the entire expenses of every kind, we can approximate very closely to the actual cost per cent to the assured. We find that the average amount of insurance carried by the company in

Year.	Amount.	Total expense.	Per cent.
1873	$ 74,495	$ 31 12	$.000,416
1874	114,190	129 51	.001,185
1875	159,512	40 50	.000,253
1876	188,954	31 00	.000,160
1877	225,214	48 10	.000,217
1878	255,758	50 69	.000,190
1879	204,559	63 58	.000,202
1880	270,479	555 17	.002,060
1881	278,015	1,251 71	.004,491
1882	288,478	155 79	.000,484
Total amount	$2,119,923	$2,353 03
Deduct amount in treasury	$ 122 07
	$2,228 01

Pursuing this calculation we find that the cost of insuring property in this company has not been far from one and one-twentieth per cent for ten years. It has been claimed that a loss of $1,000.00 could be paid yearly in addition to running expenses and still get as cheap insurance as could be had in large companies. The foregoing figures nearly justify the assertion. It must be borne in mind that this is no charity institution. Every officer is paid $2.00 per day for his services. The losses are all paid and several hundred dollars saved yearly by doing our own insuring. The future can be judged only by the past and if future events are as favorable as past experience I think we have abundant reasons for being satisfied. The business of the company is steadily increasing year by year, the amount of outstanding policies being at this date $290,164. F. G.
